

My color is gold, which represents people who are parental, follow the rules, are dependable, responsible, keep to schedule, are good decision makers and we value relationships. I see many of these qualities in myself. I am very organized at school, however, I can sometimes be very messy at home. Although Gold was my more dominant color, I see other colors in me. I am curious, intelligent, and I love playing sports and being outside. I also need people around me that will listen to me as I listen to them, and I need support. As people get to know me I change as a person. I go from being a little shy to really outgoing the more I am around someone. I feel that understanding myself better will help me find a future career that is perfect for me. I would like a warm and welcoming environment that is organized, and has everything planned out, but I also want to be able to use my problem solving skills and curiosity to learn new things. I am currently thinking about going into accounting or finance which I think will be a good fit for me. It requires problem solving skills that I possess, and still has a guideline of what I need to be accomplishing. I will be able to use my knowledge every day, and I know there is always more to learn about the job.
